Screen Order

Credits

Title

Main Menu

CDs –There will be five banks offering CD options. For the sake of simplicity, all CDs will only last five years. Each bank will offer a different % return, although they will all be rather low, as they are CDs. Clicking on one of these banks will open a field where you can type in how much money you'd like to put into the CD. After that, the money will increase by a set percentage each year for the next 5 years.

Stocks – There will be 10 options, divided into two columns. The columns will show 1) the current price of the stock, 2) how much the price has changed since last purchase, 3) if they are currently holding stock (and if not, the player has the option to buy some) and 4) how much the player currently owns. Stocks will generally be riskier the lower they are on the column, with the top being the safest.

News - A collection of news stories about the companies, stock market etc. News will be limited to 3 stories, one about banks, one about stocks, and one about the general economy (which we used to refer to as "long term").

Next Year - Increases the current year by one, which will cause all the multipliers in each page to be applied based on the news story. The page itself will show how each of the 15 items have changed, as well as what the player's total spending cash is after receiving their $5,000 dollars from their income for investments.

Results - After 45 years have passed, where after viewing the 45th Next Year screen, going back to the main screen will bring up the Final Results screen, which will show whether or not the player has achieved 1 million dollars or not, with a "Win!" or "Lose!" Message at the top depending on the result. It should be noted that the money used in the results screen will be the total of all the player's investments as well as their spending cash. At the bottom, there will be a play again and a quit button.
